The Los Angeles man who cut his throat, drank carbolic acid and jumped from a sky scraper, really intended to kill himself.

It may turn out after all that Wilson isn't such a novice at the political game as Waterman and Hurley thought.

Some men's friends really do bring them out for office, but they share little of the defeat when it comes.

There are still a few people who think that whiskey is a mighty center in cold weather, but they are likely to make other preparations.

The question of a milk and meat inspector is being talked a good deal by the people of Dothan, if that will help to cut down the risk from sickness and disease then Dothan benefited by it.

Little Joe Brown gave back into the Governor's chair in Georgia before he had time to be missed. He was only absent seven months, and there is no telling when he will get out again.

The newspapers of this section probably have more cause for complaint for the non delivery of mail at Panama City postoffice than any other point south of the Mason and Dixon line. Just why this can't be remedied no one seems able to say.

When a child wakes its mother at night with a cry that it has earache the mother feels just about like the father does when wife says she hears something after the children, and commands him to go and see about them.

Mrs. Longworth put out that pair of glass long slippers to help dulls' political situation. He isn't saying anything, and Mrs. Longworth tells that it was her only to rail the attention of the public to the fault.

For the benefit of those Kansas crusaders against whiskey, they might remember the old blue-back says: "Whiskies are thought by some to afford protection for the throat in cold weather." The author failed to say what would become of people who live in a climate where we have but a few days' cold weather: whether one is justifiable in wearing them 365 days in the year, for protection a dozen days of the year.

When neighbor's chickens eat up your winter lawn and the neighbor commences to take little chickens to do the same thing to your spring and summer grass, you don't need a slat gun—you need more religion, too—Andrusian Star.

Well, "chickens is chickens," and there are some who think of people want to run a poultry farm they would have moved outside of town where they will have plenty of room.

Col. Moore has been transferred from the prison in the Piedmont Hotel, in Atlanta, where he is having every attention to assist in regaining what two or three years' of prison life has taken from him. He may stay at the Piedmont for a few weeks, then you will hear of him taking a private car to New York. He may go from there to Europe, or he may jump right into the Wall Street game, and make some more money. He has lost a good deal of time, fooling around with the federal court formalities, but he will pick up mighty fast when he starts again.

BANKING BUSINESS.

There are a number of people doing the banking business, but the number is too small. Not enough people put their money in banks.

Some use the banks for safety, in nearly everybody there days' ago, that banks are much safer than they were years ago, and all of them carry burglar insurance, and have their books and vaults that are mighty hard to get through in the first place. Then if the money is reached, it is insured. The banks would go right about.

But the main reason why people should start bank accounts is because it helps to conserve. It makes a complete record of all business transactions, for when a check is given for the payment of a bill, the receipted bill itself might be lost, but the check shows that it has been paid.

But possibly more farmers should have their bank accounts than do. If they were to deposit their money, instead of keeping it at home in the safe, or hidden, it would be a safer thing to do, and have them trouble and worry.

We have no unsafe banks in this part of the country, and people with little money should deposit with some of the banks and let the money circulate.

AN OLD STORY.

The following is taken from a one time popular author and is probably familiar with most Eagle readers.

"Hasty and inconsiderate connections are generally attended with great disadvantages; and much of every man's good or ill fortune, depends upon the choice he makes of his friends.

"A good natured Spaniel overtook a sorry Maslin, as he was traveling upon the highroad. Tray, although an entire stranger to Tiger, very civilly greeted him; and if it would be interruption, he said, he should be glad to bear him company on his way. Tiger, who happened not to be altogether in so growing a mood as usual, accepted the proposal, and they very amicably pursued their journey together. In the midst of their conversation, they arrived at the next village, where Tiger began to display malignant disposition, by an unprovoked attack upon every dog he met.

The villagers, immediately galled forth with great indignation to receive their respective favorites; and falling upon one another, without distinction or mercy, poor Tray should be glad to bear him company on his way. Tiger, who happened not to be altogether in so growing a mood as usual, accepted the proposal, and they very amicably pursued their journey together. In the midst of their conversation, they arrived at the next village, where Tiger began to display malignant disposition, by an unprovoked attack upon every dog he met. The villagers, immediately galled forth with great indignation to receive their respective favorites; and falling upon one another, without distinction or mercy, poor Tray was cruelly treated, for no other reason than his being found in bad company."

Those who haven't read it in some time may see something in it, and many will fail to remember just where they have met this old story before.

FIDELITY.

A man who has had a good deal of experience in advertising and being advertised, says: "Advertising is the education of the public as to what you are, and what you have to offer in the way of skill, talent or commodity. The only man who should not advertise is the man who has nothing to offer in the world in the way of commodity or service."

There are so many forms of advertising besides that paid for in the daily and weekly press, or the monthly magazines.

The M. D., after the doctor's signature advertises him. The D. D., after another professional man, advertises him. The judge is advertised by his title, as are the conductors by their caps and published plate in front of it.

The preacher announces his intentions to preach at a certain time, and gives his subject, probably, and that is to advertise the fact to the public that he is to do a certain thing at a certain time.

The doctor hangs out a sign at the front of the sidewalk, modest though it is, it points the way to professional service of a certain kind. If the sign was not there, strangers would have to inquire where this kind of professional services might be had.

This form of advertising is considered dignified and the stamp of approval is placed upon it.

Merchants, who are known by everybody that comes to town; merchants who are known to everybody to carry a certain line of goods, at a certain price, no more nor less, who never have specials to offer the buying public, and no store news to tell them, need not advertise.

But the merchant who talks to the customers when they come in, and inquires of their needs; who tells the customers of certain reasonable goods he has that they might be interested in, is advertising to the public, and is justifiable in telling something about what he has, the price, etc., through the columns of the papers.

That kind of a merchant doesn't take it for granted that people will come to his store when they want anything in his line, but they people may not know at all times what he has in stock, and what prices are prevailing on certain goods.

Fifteen years ago, when we came to Dothan, all of the merchants and business men of the city combined, were not spending as much for advertising as any one of a half dozen merchants we now have.

One of the significant facts about the merchants of fifteen years ago, and now, is, that we haven't but four or five in business who were with us then. We haven't but three who didn't advertise then, and who are not advertising now.

The old order changeth. Since that time, we have seen many merchants come and go, but we have seen some who came and advertised their business and put business judgment there, who made money almost from the first. Others have just held their own, and managed to live and pay their bills, but they didn't put sound business judgment behind their money.

At this time, men who buy anything of a line of goods for the farmers, didn't are any use to spend any money getting people to come to his store. But later, when new men came in, who didn't know all of the farmers, and went after them by persistent advertising, began to draw these old customers of many years.

At this time, men who buy anything have a habit of going to the store that offers the best bargain in the commodity they want.

A result of the new order of things, there isn't a class of business in town that is not being advertised by some of the people in town. Not all of them, of course, but the number is growing each year, as I see the cross-and-merchant-moral-to-town is being forced to fields where competition is less keen.

EAGLETES.

What a man may learn his opinions are worth but little till he shows something else besides them.

It somebody had to make another emblem of Time, probably it would be Barney Oldfield with goggles and cap showing just above the windshield.

It takes a boy four or five years to get over some of the doleful ways he picks up at college, and then he is liable to catch the step and do something.

Probably the cheapest way to Christianize China is to bring their indolent young people to America and let them go through our schools and learn to pick up some Stetson, Finch, styles of dress.

Some speakers have too much confidence in their ability to keep an audience interested.

It is a great source of satisfaction to some people to be able to understand that they are not to expect a fortune from a relative.

The Dang'r of La Grippe.

Is its fatal tendency to pneumonia. To cure your la grippe caught take Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. R. E. Fisher, Washington, Kan., says: "I was troubled with a severe attack of la grippe that threatened pneumonia. A friend advised Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and I got better after taking the first few doses. I took three bottles and my la grippe was cured." Get the genuine in the yellow package. Peasapiece Marrow.
When comes into the mill and to the wheel and rollers of machinery from almost incredible distances. In the winter, when the rough, ungraded roads are frozen hard and smooth, the nation haul wheat for 300 miles, in some cases by means of a heavy, two-wheeled cart drawn by four or eight mules. Long trains of these carts, traveling together for protection and companionship at night, can be seen on the main highways all winter and are the most picturesque feature of Manchurian life.

Merely Moral Effect.
"Some of these reformers," said Cecil Haskery, "make me think of 'Rattle Plinkie's' dog. I says to 'em, 'Heater,' I says, 'Is dat dog good for rats?' An' he says, 'No; he's mighty bad for rats.' 'Does he catch 'em and kill 'em?' 'No,' says 'Rattle'; 'he don't catch 'em, nor he don't kill 'em. But if they comes fooin' around him, he'll mighty near skew 'em to death.'—Washington Star.

Not Profanity.
The word "dam" is the name of a small coin used in India and of very small value, and is also the name given by thinkers to a small word of paper put into a hole in a wall when making it for the purpose of preventing the soldier from running through. Both uses of little value, so the expression really means "I don't care the value of a dam."

Forewarned.
"Your father tells me," said the earl, "that he intends to leave all his money to charity." "Oh, don't let that worry you at all," replied the beautiful heiress. "I'm sure he doesn't mean it. He told me last night that he was going to try to find out whether you really loved me for myself alone."

Raising the Wind.
"There ain't a dollar in the town treasury," said the mayor of Billville to the town marshal, "and you'll get no salary this month." "Never holler at me," said the cheerful marshal. "There are six automobiles headed this way. Just make out the fines for exceedin' the speed limit, an' leave the rest to me!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Good Substitute for Sardines.
The fact that Maine herring, when quite young, are canned and marketed for sardines done up in olive oil, is fairly well known. As the home product is about as tasty and wholesome as the imported article, there is not much use of getting excited over the imposition.

Napoleon's Capricious Appetite.
Napoleon had a penchant for roast fowls, outlets and smoking coffee. He ate at odd times, and only when he felt hungry, driving his cooks to distraction because when he called for food it had to be ready for him almost on the instant, or at least as soon as the table could be laid.

Home Defined.
Home is a magic word, and we seldom try to analyze it. A little Polish girl in a public school was asked recently to write a definition of "home." "A home," she wrote, "is where people live, and where a man or somebody comes home and finds people there, and then eats!"

Credit Societies.
There are now 3,455 urban and rural co-operative credit societies in India, with a membership of 226,558 and a working capital of $3,442,580, of which only $240,690 is contributed by the government. These figures represent the work of about seven years.

Letter Undraped.
Little Lola, aged five, went to the door in answer to the postman's ring, and was handed a postal card, the first she had ever seen. "Oh, mamma," she exclaimed, "there's a letter for you, but it hasn't got any skirt on!"

Fortune in Burro's Kick.
Once, in Colorado, a miner who had been kicked in the stomach by his burro found, when he began to dust off his breeches, that it was gold dust from soft quartz adhering to "om— and he was made.

Platinum.
Referring to platinum, books say that "this metal has never yet been successfully deposited as a plating coating to other metals" and add "the metal to be plated must be coppered."

Overcoming the Grouch.
A grumpy prospect doesn't seem half so grumpy when you stand right up to him and state your proposition in a fearless manner.

Superficial.
There are some people who keep their morality in the plecter; it is a staff of which they never cut themselves a coal.—Joubert.

Frederick the Great of Prussia Was Said to Be a Wonderful Flute Player.

Abdul Hamid used to amuse himself while he was enjoying life at Yıldir Kiosk by strumming a lute. He was on the piano and perhaps that wonderful piece of resistance of our brass bands still makes life endurable in his Sultan's villa.

George III was fond of shouting the melodies of Handel's choruses for the delectation of his court but the world has seen no real musical genius since Frederick the Great played his last tune on his flute. Though of course even Frederick could stand no comparison with our own Henry VIII who played remarkably well.

The centenary of the birth of Frederick celebrated on January 24 has revived interest in the great monarch's playing and a certain industrious Johannes Hoenigsen has written contemporary comments on his playing. It seems that the king exhaled in adagio movement into which he infused a warmth and tenderness of feeling that would hardly have been expected from the conqueror of Rossbach and the friend of Voltaire. It is difficult to listen to his performance without weeping, says one musician.

One reason why he preferred adagio was that he was somewhat short of breath which made him eschew orchestral accompaniments for the more delicate assistance of the clavichord when he was practicing.

Toward the end of the Seven Years war he sat down to play in a quiet room and at the finish cried out enthusiastically: "It is as sweet as sugar!" His companions were not so sure. For Frederick had just a tooth and his fingers had stiffened with gout. But in 1759 he had to give up his flute playing and I have just my best friend was the wait of the disconsolate monarch.—The Journal des Debats

Life in the Cyclone Belt Since the excitement caused by the cyclone has somewhat subsided some of the queer incidents of the storm are coming to light. Arthur I. Langdon, two miles west of town, records among the other losses of twenty-five thoroughbred Rhode Island Red chickens. The wind carried away the coop and neither the chickens nor the coop can be found.

When the John F. Dwyer home was demolished among the house furnishings swept away was a parlor organ. This instrument was found yesterday in a field opposite where the house stood and from all appearances had suffered no damage except what had resulted from standing out in the rain and snow.

The six-year-old daughter of Fred Kelley of Eaton Rapids township was sliding home from town with her parents when the storm struck the carriage, tore it loose from the horse and pitched it bottom up against the wire fence by the roadside.

The father picked the child up from the ground gave her a few dizzys and tossed her into the top of an apple tree where she clung to the branches until rescued by her father. The only injury inflicted being a severe fright.—Eaton Rapids Correspondence Detroit Free Press

Waning Diplomatism Diplomacy is not a career which encourages the growth of a strong personality. The diplomatist is necessarily the tool of other men. Wanderling from capital to capital he is the mouthpiece of successive ministers to whose divergent policies he must adapt himself with the good grace that leads to swift promotion. If he develops decided views of his own or allows himself to cultivate embassies along sympathies he is apt to be marked as a dangerous and uncomfortable subordinate for whom there will presently yaw a more obscure and distant hole in a South American legation.

The great ambassadors lived in the days when no telegraph had yet been invented to make bureaucracy omnipresent. It wants only some further perfection of the long distance telephone to abolish the diplomatist altogether.

Wells and Strachey H. G. Wells the noted English novelist was being discussed at the Franklin Inn in Philadelphia. Wells is continually attacked by the Spectator the editor said. "Saint Louis Strachey the Spectator's editor is a narrow minded man and he will bes Wells with as Clement Scott used to vilify Dostoevsky.

But Wells doesn't mind. One day at the National Liberal club he threw down a copy of the Spectator containing a scurrilous attack on him and he said:

There are just two things that I always ardently wish to be sure of—the love of God and the hatred of Saint Louis Strachey.

A Sympathetic Pair

A man wearing a yellow tie with scarlet dots was riding to town on a suburban train. As he rode he kept looking intently at a man across the aisle who wore a green tie with lavender stripes. Finally the man with the stripes said:

You keep looking at me as though you thought I bought this tie. I wish to have you know this tie is not my taste at all. My sister gave it to me Christmas and I have to wear it. She lives next door to me.

Wasn't thinking about your tie at all said the man with dots. My wife gave me mine.

Fresh Meat Should Be Used and With a Reasonable Amount of Care the Result Will Be Satisfying

Soup is the prelude of the dinner. It is light, healthy, stimulating food that gently prepares the dinner for heavier food to come.

The earliest mention of soup that occurs to me is the dish of cabbage for which I was sold a birthday. There can be little doubt that Rebecca was a fine cook for we know how she made the tempting dish for which he gave his inheritance. Tender pieces of fresh killed fowl were seethed in milk and seasoned with herbs and thickened with meal. This makes a most excellent idea that even these enlightened days have not improved upon.

Indeed, there are but two kinds of soup thick and thin or plain. The thick fat soups comprise bisques, cream soups, tureens and mixed soups. The thin soups or soup maigres, as the French designate them, are consommé or bouillon and clarified broths.

When making soup use the freshest meat obtainable. Split the bones and cut the meat in small pieces. Put to cook in cold salted water. This permits the albumen to dissolve before the water commences to boil. This albumen and gelatin rises to the top of the soup kettle but should not be skimmed off, as much of it will be assimilated in the process of cooking and it contains the richest juices of the meat. After the contents of the soup kettle have commenced boiling briskly season and add the vegetables and herbs. Keep it boiling slowly and continuously. Thirty minutes to one hour of meat is the usual time allowed but longer cooking is sometimes necessary. Bisques are the richest and most satisfying of all soups. They originated in 1700 and 1750 and these ancient ones differed greatly from the modern style which is only a vegetable soup enriched with cream and well thickened. The original bisque well deserve to be resurrected.—Henrietta D. Gravel

Stewed Liver

Cut up in slices half a pound of calf's liver and the same quantity of fat bacon. Put first a layer of bacon at the bottom of a pie dish then one of liver, sprinkle with salt and pepper, add a medium sized onion and one apple both cut up, cover down and let it stew gently in the oven for about an hour and a quarter. No water is required.

Carrot Salad

Wash and scrape tender rich colored carrots. Throw them into fast boiling water and boil until soft, cut them into very thin slices, put them into a glass bowl and sprinkle with sifted loaf sugar, add the juice of a large lemon and a wineglassful of olive oil, garnish the dish with very thin slices of lemon and any kind of green salad leaves.

Pineapple Tapioca

To make this take one quart of water, one cup of instantanous tapioca, one cup of sugar and whites of four eggs. When water is boiling stir the tapioca and sugar into it quickly. Let cook until it thickens then add pineapple cut fine. Pour while hot over white of eggs beaten stiff. Turn in moulds and serve cold with cream.

CHILD OUTWITS ANGRY FATHER

The two were in an apparent state of supreme happiness sitting and chatting about how easy it was done when in walked Oliver J. Rollins and after stating to the young man that he was wanted in Georgia is the chief of police at Blakely asked the blushing young lady to also come with him. He questioned the young man for some time and after reaching the city hall where a call for the officer or driving his arrest was put in the officer turned to his prisoner and inquired of him as to whether or not he knew what the charge was on which the Georgia official wanted him. Well, officer the young man began, I suppose it's all about her for I stole this girl last night and because I outwitted the old man he's sore but I've sent him for we were married last night and as soon as you get the chief at Blakely over the phone, you may tell him so and that he can't help him self now.

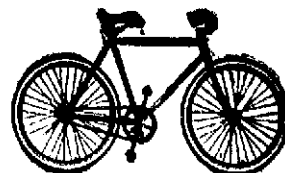

While the young couple, who were a nice looking bride and groom were sitting in the city hall awaiting a message for their release from the Georgia officials the young man related the story of his elopement to an interested audience while the bride nodded and blushed of course. He told how he had slipped her out of the house and of how as he was hastening along the Georgia road for the church that the sounds of the old man's horse grew louder and louder on their trail. The henchmen laughed as he told of how he had taken his bride to be from the buggy and turned the team over to a boy to drive for him and about how he hid in the bushes and watched the angry father go to bed with his trusty muzzle loader ready for business. He brought the interesting story to a close when he told of going to a minister's home where they were married while the father of the bride was waiting at the little church around the bend where the ceremony had been scheduled to take place and where the old man driven at today looked down upon a disappointed and dejected father.

The groom is Mr. Pat Everett of Millville, Fla. and the bride was Miss Harris the daughter of a prominent citizen of Early county Georgia.

ARGUMENT FOR FRESH AIR

Monty Mollycoddle Has Convinced
Reply for Man Who Opened
Window on Chilly Evening

Monty Mollycoddle closed the window. Freddy Freshlight opened it. Then they frowned at each other. "You mind lowering the window, old chap?" said Monty. "This weather's a scorching treacherous, and on these chilly evenings one can't be too careful."

"On the contrary," retorted Freddy. "One can kill oneself with care." "Yes, but it's easier to kill oneself with a draft," observed Monty. "Nonsense," replied Freddy. "Look at all these modern cranks and compare them with our splendid ancestors. They don't stand comparison! And our ancestors didn't take much exercise, or stay in stuffy rooms or bind their backs with swollen cushions when they went out."

"I know they didn't," answered Monty. "And where are they now? All dead!" —Answer—

Unfair Advantage
"Dibs is a most disagreeable person."

"Now, what has Dibs been doing to you?"

"Just because he knows how to pronounce two or three Chinese names, he is always turning the conversation to the upheaval in China."

Hard to Lift.
"There goes a merchant who has a supreme contempt for shoplifters."

"You surprise me."

"He doesn't care how many come into his store."

"Well! Well! What does he sell?"

"Bales. There isn't one in his store that weighs less than 2,500 pounds."

Long Wait in Store.
"Miss Dainty Winters says she is going to stand under the mistletoe."

"Just so."

"What would you suggest?"

"When she gets tired of resting most of her weight on one foot, she might shift it to the other."

The Power of Beauty.
"Brown's wife is a beautiful woman, isn't she?"

"She surely is."

"If I had a wife as beautiful as that she could buy me all the Christmas neckties she wanted to—and I'd wear 'em, by gum!"

WHAT HE THOUGHT.

Customer (in clear store)—I want to buy a pipe.

Shopman—Yes, sir, how long would you like it?

Customer—I reckon I can keep it as long as it lasts, can't I?

Unpoetic
"I shall leave footprints on the sands of time," said the lady.

"What for?" asked the curiously precise person. "Subjects will want to go and look for footprints. What we do to do for posterity is to help build some good roads—Washington Star."

Didn't Like Her Views
Mrs. Gibbs—So you had a gathering at your home last week to discuss the most important problem. Were there any results?

Mrs. Gibbs—Yes, the servants overheard us and gave notice.

A Bright Idea
"Wearing a corset is a very good way to hide a bald spot on top of one's head."

Quite True
"Wearing a hat is an older kind way."

Before Hostilities Began
"I hope your novel ends happily?"

"Indeed it does. It ends in the marriage of the heroine and hero, who go into their married life at all."

How Surface of Antique Furniture Was Made to Resist Hot Plates and Dishes.

I was staying with an antique furniture enthusiast the other day and was very much interested to find that hot plates and dishes seem to have no effect on his old gaudy dining table. Says a writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer:

I inquired how it was managed, and this is what he told me:

When the table was bought, the first thing he did was to remove the coating of French polish that was already on it. This he did by scrubbing it with hot water to which a good allowance of washing powder had been added. When the whole was off the wood was cleaned with clear, warm water, and then rubbed over with a cloth dipped in vinegar and water (equal quantities). You'll probably think that after such harsh treatment it was ruined, but it wasn't.

After applying the vinegar and water he rubbed it as dry as possible, and when dry he started to polish it with boiled linseed oil. One can buy it all ready for use at any oil and paint shop.

Taking a very little of the oil on a soft cloth, he began to polish with a circular movement round and round. When he had gone all over the surface he polished well with a clean soft flannel till all trace of the oil was removed.

Next day he repeated the process, and then he did every day, barring Sunday, for six months, adding just a

(the last month or two.

The result is a hard, beautifully polished surface that does not mark even if hot plates or dishes are put on the table.

It is now polished very occasionally only, with a little turpentine and beeswax, made so thin that it can be shaken up in a bottle.

I have come back terribly dissatisfied with my own French polish dining table which shows a white mark on the slightest provocation.

COOK VEGETABLES

QUESTIONS THAT MAY BE HELPFUL TO HOUSEWIFE.

Properly Cooked and Sliced Up Vegetables Should Take More Prominent Place on Table—Few Do the Work Right.

One of the greatest drawbacks to the success of vegetarianism is that few people know how to cook vegetables. Sudden boiling is not in any way the word right cooking even the vegetables are half-strained afterwards and sent to table with puddings of well watered butter through them, masquerading as sauce. When vegetables are boiled the water should be saved for stock, for it has nourishing qualities that have been given out in the process of cooking, to prevent the cooking by steam in the best method that can be recommended. Properly cooked and sliced up vegetables might be promoted to a much more important position at our tables, on occasions they might very well take the place of meat even among those who do not profess vegetarian principles.

When steaming is resorted to, the steam should be brought directly into contact with the green food that is being cooked, if possible. A home-made steamer may, of course, be constructed, and a milk can may be made to serve this purpose if a mullin cloth is tied across the top. Carrots, peas, sprouts, cauliflower or spinach may be put in this inner can and steamed while potatoes are boiling in the water outside. Place a little butter in the improvised bain marie if cabbage, spinach, sprouts, French beans or cauliflower should be the vegetable chosen, and add a little water for some cases milk, then allow the vegetables to steam slowly the water in the outside vessel being kept boiling but not too fast.

While boiling the pan should be well filled with water which should always be kept boiling and the lid of the pan should not be quite closed. Here it may be said that the method of pouring off the water preparatory to adding a little butter is a barbarous one, the vegetables should be thoroughly drained and then returned into a pan in which the butter is already melted.

Potatoes are best cooked by steam and new potatoes are particularly nice when prepared in this fashion, quite dry with a little butter added before they are sent to table.

It is because vegetables that have been cooked by steam have not as good a color as when boiled that this method is sometimes taken to this section and the perforated steamer preferred. When however boiling is the method chosen the vegetables should be carefully prepared and outside green leaves should all be removed while steeping in salt gives firmness and will destroy and remove any lurking insects. If the vegetable is then put for five minutes in boiling water and afterwards again into cold the color will be improved and a little sugar in the cooking water also helps the color.

Cauliflower is a vegetable which appeals to all tastes and it is also one of the most nourishing of our vegetables and in price practically within the reach of all. Like all vegetables for boiling it requires care in cooking. First soak the cauliflower in salted water for an hour drain and have it whole or break it into sprigs if preferred, removing the outer leaves. Then put it into a large pan full of boiling salted water and boil till the green parts are soft.

Root vegetables among which are included rutabaga, celery, artichokes, turnips and carrots are best boiled in unsalted water and the heat must not be too fast and furious or the vegetables will become tough. Parsnips are one of the many vegetables which are unappreciated because it is rarely cooked in a fashion which makes the most of its flavor. It should not be watery when served but sent to table thoroughly dry with butter sauce.

Beef Rolls

The remains of cold roast or boiled beef seasoned to taste of salt pepper and minced herbs, puff paste. Minced beef tolerably fine, with a small amount of its own fat, add a season of pepper salt and chopped herbs put the whole into a roll of puff paste and bake for half an hour or rather longer should the roll be made of puff paste may be made of cold meat by mincing and seasoning beef is directed above and baking in a rich puff paste in patty tins.

Sauce for Plum Pudding

Cream together a cupful of sugar and half a cupful of butter. When light and creamy add the well beaten yolks of four eggs stir into this one wineglass of wine or brandy, a pinch of salt and one large cupful of cold cream or milk. Beat this mixture well place it in a saucepan over the fire stir it until it cooks sufficiently to thicken like cream. Be sure and do not let it boil.

Apple Butter.

Parse and quarter apples and cook them in just enough water to keep them from burning, about a pint of water to four quarts of apples. Cook until very soft, then run them through a sieve and add half as much sugar as pulp. To four quarts of apples use half a teaspoon of whole cloves and cinnamon tied in a bag. Cook until wood and thick.

DYSPEPTIC PHILOSOPHY.

It isn't every fellow who can make a bit with the misers.

It's poor consolation for a hungry man to swallow his pride.

It doesn't require an earthquake to shake our faith in some people.

Of all human virtues the world is apt to regard success as the greatest.

Good intentions are the paving stones on which many a man slips up.

The people who pose as martyrs seem to get a heap of satisfaction out of it.

It's the unexpected that happens but we generally bring it on our selves.
